

Inter Valley Health Plan employees assist charities

A group of 50 employees from Inter Valley Health Plan contributed 155 hours of their time last week during the company's first Employee Community Involvement Week activities.

Employees volunteered at 13 local nonprofit organizations including the American Cancer Society Thrift Shop, Community Senior Services, Inland Hospice, Inland Valley Hope Partners and Meals on Wheels, according to a statement from the company.

"We are very proud of our employees for taking such an active role in this week-long initiative," said Inter Valley Health Plan President and CEO Ronald H. Bolding.

"Their volunteer spirit has been contagious and many are now seeking additional opportunities to give back to these wonderful charitable organizations. Because of their positive response, we will most likely bring back this volunteer event next year."

The activity served as a way of assisting the community and to kick off the company's 30th anniversary festivities. Nonprofit organizations were chosen based on need and employee suggestions.
monica.rodriquez@inlandnewspapers.com

